Category: Soft Adventure

The Rupununi is a vast area of dry grassland with sparse trees, termites mounds and wooded hills in the Southwest of the country. The savannah is divided into the North and South Rupununi by the Kanuku Mountains and scattered with occasional Amerindian villages and a few large cattle ranches.

Rupununi is an area rich in wildlife, particularly rare and endangered species such as the Black Caiman, Giant Otter, Jaguar (South America's largest cat). Bird life is rich, particularly in the forest galleries, and the Kanuku Mountains provide a home for the Harpy Eagle, the world's largest and fiercest Eagle.

Boa Vista, located 124 km from the Guyana/Brazil border, offers a taste of Brazilian Culture and Cuisine. The two countries are separated by the Takutu River to the South. In September 2009, the Takutu Bridge was commissioned
